

MINERS UNION MAY BE SUED

Operators' Association Likely to Take Such Action

RESULT OF NUMEROUS STRIKES

Executive Committee Directs Gathering of Evidence in Cases—Declared That Mine Operators Have Been Damaged in the Amount of More Than $180,000 by Frequent Suspension of Work in Alleged Violation of Contract.

At the session of the executive committee of the Association of Bituminous Mine Operators of Central Pennsylvania, held at the Dimeling Tuesday, it was decided to move the offices of the association from Philadelphia to Clearfield. Rooms have been secured in the Kurtz building on Second street, and these will be fitted up and occupied by the local representatives of the association about August 1.

John C. Forsyth, Esq., was elected commissioner and secretary-treasurer of the association and will have charge of the offices here.

Will Gather Evidence.

The association directed its attorneys here, Messrs. Boulton & Forsyth, to gather evidence relating to strikes which have occurred among miners of district No. 2, with a view to bringing suit against the United Mine Workers of America of the district for damages.

There have been quite a number of strikes at the mines in the district in past year or two, and operators' association asserts, that many of these were in violation to the contracts entered into between the miners and operators.

Will Enforce Contracts.

It is stated that hereafter the operators will take the same stand taken by the miners and enforce the letter of all contracts. After the evidence required by the association has been procured suits may be brought against the miners' union. It is said by an official of the association that $180,000 would not cover the amount

VANCE M'CORMICK TO BE AT BIG PICNIC

Democratic Candidate For Governor Will Visit New Millport

New Millport is to be honored by the presence of one of the candidates for governor on occasion of the big picnic in that town. The promoters of the picnic have been in communication with the various candidates, inviting them to attend and address the crowd, and an acceptance of the invitation by Vance McCormick, Democratic candidate for governor, has been received by the picnic committee. The letter of acceptance is as follows:

Harrisburg, July 20, 1914.

Dr. E. S. Erhard,

New Millport, Pa.

The campaign committee has booked the Hon. Vance McCormick for your picnic on July 30, 1914.

Mr. Warren Vandye, secretary of the state central committee, will communicate this fact to you officially and advise you as to Honorable McCormick's movements enroute to New Millport.

W. E. A.,

Secretary.

The presence of Mr. McCormick at the picnic will no doubt draw a big crowd to New Millport.

A SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION

County Sunday School Association Meets at Ramey

SEVERAL FINE SPEECHES MADE

Discussion of Questions Affecting the Work of Sunday Schools Was Interesting—Other News of the Mining Town in Southern Part of County.

District No. 8 of the Clearfield County Sabbath School association held a profitable convention in the Ramey M. E. church Tuesday afternoon and evening. Addresses were made by the following persons: Welcome, E. C. Davis; response, John Stoker; "What Does a Teacher Owe the Class?" Mrs. Chas. Snively; "How to Get Children into the Sunday School," W. P. Cornely; "How can we hold that boy?" Rev. John Mitchell; "Why do so few Sunday School Children attend Church?" H. A. Reed.

The following officers were elected for 1914-15:

President, E. C. Davis, Ramey. Vice President, J. A. Shoff, Madera. Secretary, Miss Elizabeth Hopkins, Ramey.

Treasurer, John Davis, Madera. Superintendents of departments were elected as follows:

Elementary, Miss Mae Cornely, of Madera.

Missionary, Miss Ether Mills, Ramey.

Temperance, Russel Snively, Ramey.

O. A. B. C., W. P. Cornely, Madera. Home, Mrs. J. M. Cornely, Madera. Normal, Mrs. Maud Gallagher, Smith Mills.

The next convention of this district will be held at Janesville M. E. church on Wednesday, June 24, 1915.

James H. Minds has purchased the vacant lot adjoining the residence of Sol McCully, and already has stone and sand on the ground for the erection of a large store building. At present the large general store of W. R. Minds & Co., is located at Beulah. The new location will be much more central and will be a great convenience to the people of this section.

WANTED IN THE JAIL

Some Person Disturbs the Slumbers Sheriff McCloskey.

About 2 o'clock this morning Sheriff McCloskey and several girls who work in the sheriff's house part of the jail heard somebody trying to enter the prison. The noise awoke the inmates of the house, and the sheriff investigated, but could find nobody.

From the racket the fellow made it was evident that he was either anxious to get inside of the jail or had mistaken the bastille for a hotel. That anybody should attempt to break into the jail surprises the sheriff, who has heretofore had trouble in preventing those within from breaking out.

DEATH OF A MOST ESTIMABLE LADY

Mrs. Margaret Troutman Passes Away After Long Illness

Mrs. Margaret Troutman, one of Clearfield's oldest citizens, died at her home on Cherry street, Saturday at 12 o'clock. Mrs. Troutman was born in Bellefonte, January 5, 1830. In 1851 she married John Troutman and came to Clearfield to live. Mr. Troutman died two years ago.

Mrs. Troutman is survived by one brother, Thomas Herd, of Altoona, 89 years of age, and her niece, Miss Frances Shay, whom Mrs. Troutman adopted when she was 9 months old. She had been failing slowly for several years and passed away in a quiet and peaceful manner, retaining her sweet, patient disposition until the end.

The funeral was held on Monday at 3:00 from her residence on Cherry street, and interment was made in the old cemetery. The funeral was in charge of Dr. H. R. Bender, of the Trinity church, of which deceased was a faithful and consistent member.

Mrs. Troutman was a lovable woman who had a host of friends. The patience she displayed during her long years of suffering attested to the sincerity of her Christian faith, and the testimony of her many friends is not needed to prove that she was one of Clearfield's most estimable women.

MARRIED AT NIAGARA FALLS

Two Couples of Young People From This Section Wed.

Buffalo, July 22—Monday a marriage license was issued at Niagara Falls to William E. Heverling and Miss Ada V. Young, both of Clearfield. Tuesday at noon Thomas Smith, of Clearfield, and Miss Alpha Garsard, of Big Run, Jefferson county, took a license.

Both couples are now on their wedding trip.

Caillaux Trial Arouses Political Factions to a Frenzy

PALACE GUARDS REDOUBLED

Defense May Enter Plea of Temporary Insanity in Mme. Caillaux Case—Her Husband Gives Testimony Amid Excitement—Says He Failed to Realize Effect of Calumnies Upon His Wife.

(By International News Service)

Paris, July 22—The force of republican guards has been redoubled at the palace of justice to prevent further outbreaks of political factionalism at the trial of Mme. Caillaux.

Seething crowds began gathering hours before the third day's session. Mobs, headed by Leon Faguet and other Royalist leaders, indulged in howling parades against former minister Caillaux.

There is a possibility of the defense switching today to temporary insanity.

Charges may be brought against Caillaux, as the result of his secret correspondence on Germany's regime, while he was in office, which damaged France in the Moroccan crisis.

Caillaux on Stand.

Joseph Caillaux held the court for two intense hours yesterday, testifying in defense of his wife, who sat in the prisoner's enclosure, charged with the killing of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, on March 16 last.

The appearance of M. Caillaux was hardly less dramatic than that of Mme. Caillaux Monday. The former premier, still one of the most powerful men in France, dominated the proceedings, imposing upon them his personality and uncommon gifts of leadership.

"I accuse myself," he cried in the climax. "I committed a fault. I should myself have acted; but absorbed by public affairs, I failed to realize the ravages Calmette's calumnies had made on the soul of my wife."

M. Caillaux spoke as if in the chamber, his voice of high tenor, softened in quality, sometimes rising to falsetto in moments of excitement. He gesticulated freely, pointing a singularly long forefinger as he addressed the judges or the jury, and occasionally it moved in the direction of his wife.

Almost a Riot.

He related what he knew of the cause of the shooting of Calmette and then asked to be confronted with Louis Latzarus, one of the members of the Figaro staff, who had previously testified that Calmette had told him he had diplomatic document important enough absolutely to crush Caillaux.

The two men were in the wildest excitement as they stood beside the bar, and appeared to restrain themselves with difficulty from springing at each other.

Latzarus refused to specify the contents of the documents unless forced to do so, as their divulgence would constitute a grave danger to France. He was then heard to say something about "the chief whom I loved and whom Caillaux assassinated."

The courtroom broke into a violent uproar; the scene recalled the famous Zola trial. Caillaux shouted above the din:

"I cannot tolerate such language. I

THAT DEER CASE

Superior Court Says Law of 1909 Was Not Repealed.

In its opinion and decree in the case of Dr. Dickson, charged with killing a deer the horns of which were not visible above the hair, the indictment against whom was quashed by Judge Searle, specially sitting in the Clearfield county court, the superior court decides that the law of 1913 did not repeal the law of 1909, but merely amended it without removing the restriction relative to the horns of a deer being visible above the hair.

The court quotes judicial authority for its decision and says that the change of wording in the act of 1913 does not affect the fact that the horns of a deer must be visible above the hair to make its killing legal. The statutory provision of the act of 1909 still remains and it is still a penal offense to kill a deer, the horns of which are not visible above the hair. The case of Dr. Dickinson will therefore be tried before the Clearfield county court at a future session.

Seeks Relief from Asthma.

Miss Mildred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Ellenberger, of West Market street, has gone to Luthersburg to spend a few weeks in the hope that the change of altitude may bring her relief from her affliction, which is caused by asthma. She is a guest at the Carlisle hotel at that place.

BOLD ROBBERS IN MADERA DISTRICT

Safe in Postoffice Blown Open and Robbers Shot at

For some time it has been believed that a gang of robbers has made its headquarters in that section of Clearfield county in the vicinity of Madera. A number of buildings have been entered and some property stolen, but the identity of the thieves has not yet been discovered.

Monday night the safe in the postoffice at Madera was blown open. The citizens heard the noise of the explosion and hastened to the scene. Several men were seen running from the building, and one citizen fired a shot at the fleeing burglars, but without known result.

It is said that several suspicious persons went to a hotel in one of the towns after the robberies and paid for what they ordered with pennies, presumably the loot from some place that had been entered.

The citizens of that section talk of organizing a vigilance committee to run down the gang, which is evidently made up of desperate characters.

MURDERER OF POLICE CHIEF COMMITS SUICIDE IN JAIL

(By International News Service)

Boston, July 22—Lawrence Robinson, alias "Diamond Chip" on trial charged with the murder of Police Inspector Norton, suicided by cutting his throat and the artery in his arm with a sharpened metal arch support of his shoe, in the Charles street jail this morning. Every effort was made to save him, but he died shortly afterward.

Robinson was born at Washington Court House, Ohio, and was aged 32 years.

SUITS AGAINST NEW HAVEN RAILROAD WILL START SOON

(By International News Service)

Washington, July 22—The department of justice authorized the statement that, following an equity suit against the New Haven railroad, ordered by President Wilson yesterday, will almost certainly be filed in New York within the next 48 hours. The criminal proceedings against the directors probably will not be started for some days yet. The government officials are preparing for the great est "malefactor-of-great-wealth" battle in the history of the nation.

It is intimated that every effort will be made to set aside the immunity supposedly granted to Charles S. Melien, former president of the New Haven, in exchange for his testimony before the interstate commerce commission.

WHY?

Why worry over things which are
not likely to happen when you can be glad over something that has happened?

Good evening! Don't imagine that the ghosts of the flies you swatted
will return to haunt you.

After the army worm, what?

That man Carranza is talking like a prospective candidate for president of Mexico.

Huerta says President Wilson helped
to make him famous. But Huerta
made himself infamous by his course
in Mexico.

Martin Brumbaugh might declare
that he is against Penrose with as much sincerity as the drunkard might
say he is against a lamppost—because he has to lean on it.

Washington, Pa., and New Castle
might give other towns some interesting history of automobile factory
promoters, if they can talk of such matters without getting angry.

We are not personally acquainted with D. W. Anderson, but we wish to say right here that we wish Clearfield
had one hundred such enterprising citizens as Mr. Anderson is proving himself to be in his plan to give the
town a number of new houses.

THE WIFE BEATER.

Cases in which recreant husbands
have been haled into court to answer
the charge of wife desertion are not uncommon in Clearfield county. In some of these cases the wife herself
may be responsible for her husband's dereliction, for some of the females of
the species have ways about them
which drive the best of husbands to forsake home and associations in the search for peace. In most of the cases coming before the Clearfield
county court, however, the evidence
of the husband's culpability is such

that the usual penalty is prescribed.
When to the offense of wife desertion is added the crime of wife beating it is difficult for attendants at
court to regret that the law does not provide adequate punishment for the brutal husband. A case of this kind
came before the court this week, a frail, broken hearted woman who had endured for years the cowardly attacks of her husband until she could
stand no more, appealed to the court
for relief. None of those who heard
this prematurely old woman tell her
pitiful story to the court while her
husband sat by, sneering at her tale
of brutality on his part could help
feeling that it would have done them
good to have that fellow out in the
woods alone for a quarter of an hour,
that they might reason with him with
a club.

Such a man as that is not punished by being sent to jail for a few months. He cannot be reasoned with,
for his sense of justice is dulled and
his respect for the law is deficient. If this class of wife beaters were to be compelled to work on some public improvement or break stone for use on roads or streets, the proceeds of his labor to be given to his wife and children, he might be made of some use to the state and his family. This would be practical punishment, such
as the brutal wife beater deserves.

A CAMPAIGN OF LIES.

That the Penrose machine is desperate because it sees the inevitable defeat of Senator Penrose for reelection is evident from the numerous
falsehoods which the publicity bureau
financed by Penrose is circulating
through the state. No lie is so baseless that it is not seized upon by the tools of the machine to offer to the voters.

One of the lies so industriously circulated a week ago was that William Draper Lewis, Washington candidate
for governor would withdraw in behalf of Vance McCormick. So palpably
false was this rumor that none of the voters of the Washington party placed
any credence in it. William Draper
Lewis, instead of being ready and willing to withdraw in favor of some
other candidate, has started on another campaigning tour, and will remain on the stump until the day before the election, telling the people
what they may expect if they reelect
Penrose.

The Washington party was never
stronger in the state than it is at this
time, and it is gaining strength daily. A large majority of the people of Pennsylvania are opposed to the election of Boise Penrose, because
they know he is the agent of special
privilege in the United States senate.
These voters know that Penrose can-
not be defeated by any other candidate than Gifford Pinchot. The hopelessly split Democracy cannot defeat
Penrose. The only hope, therefore, of removing Penrose from a position
which he has used to further the interests of beneficiaries of special privilege is by electing Gifford Pinchot
to the United States senate.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

A delightful picnic was held at
camp Golden-Rod Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Dorothy Tompkins, of Ridgway. A pleasant time was spent in playing games, after which delicious refreshments were served. The

Esther Knepp, Grace Underwood,
Grace Stewart, Mary Ellen Knepp,
Kathryn Musser, Vera Wisner, Elea-
nor Martin and Marian Underwood.
Chaperones, Mrs. Tompkins, of Ridgway and Mrs. Knepp. The party was conveyed to and from the camp by the genial Mr. Knepp.

The Very Best Flour That Money Can Buy
BIG LOAF

IN THE MOVIES

The thirteenth series of "Lucile
Love" will be shown at the New opera
house this evening. Taking advantage
of Loubeque's quarrel with Thompson,
his butler, Lucile picks up the price-
less documents from the floor where they have fallen. She runs out of the house and escapes in Loubeque's auto
and makes a wild dash for the American frontier. Loubeque pursues her in another car, the way is rough and Loubeque can better understand the
handling of a car under such conditions than the girl. Lucile's chauffeur
loses his head and the car plunges
over the edge of the cliff into a terrible abyss. When she gains consciousness Lucile finds herself being
taken care of by Loubeque, the papers
are gone and she is just where she was in the beginning. The futility of
the attempt dawns upon Lucile and
unasked she agrees to give up the
fight and returns to San Francisco.
In her heart she has begun to admire
Loubeque—his steadfastness to a purpose which could actuate only a man
of intense character and brilliant
imagination. Though he dare not admit it to himself Loubeque has a feeling for Lucile which is far greater
than a passing admiration for her determination, bravery and energy in fighting apparently insurmountable
obstacles.

Loubeque however, has not lost sight
of his object, to ruin the man who
shook his sweetheart and wrecked his life. And he proceeds as soon as he reaches home to do so. Lucile,
masquerading as a cabaret dancer, listens to him unfolding his plan to a comrade. Then an unexpected thing
happens. Lieutenant Gibson, Lucile's
lover, happens into the cafe and recognizes Lucile and will have nothing
to do with her and rushes from the cafe.

People who enjoy a laughable comedy should not miss "The Triangle Marriage," which will be shown at the New opera house this evening. It is a series of laughable incidents from beginning to end. Some one in past years said, "laugh and grow fat," and
the author of this comedy must have
had that saying in mind when he produced this photoplay. Daughter is a

sweet girl, but she has a strong will
of her own. Mother plans that she marry Harry; father picks Johnny,
but she herself prefers Billy. A mild
war is declared when she suddenly
thinks of a way to solve the matter.

Promptly the mischievous maiden
writes two letters, one to Harry, telling him to disguise and come over
that evening and elope; the other to Johnny, telling him to dress as a woman wearing a heavy veil and come
over for the same purpose. At the appointed hour father and mother each
feign sleep, each thinking that she will elope with their favorite. The two rivals elope together and are
married at the justice of the peace's
office while the daughter escapes with Billy.

"A Modern Fairy Tale" is a delightful play which is to be shown at the New opera house this evening. It is just the kind of story you will enjoy
after the other features of the evening.

Henry McRae, director of the "101
Bison" company, is declared by his
actors to be the hardest working man
in the world. They tell this story of
him. Coming back on the steamer
Mastonia from Hawaii, where the
company recently spent four months
making feature films of Hawaiian life
and scenery, the actors completed the
two reel film upon which they were working. Two more days still remained before the ship was to land at San Francisco. Two days of rest, no
work, no grease paint, no strenuous
jumps from fifty foot rigging into
angry waves. Nothing but lemonade,
deck chairs and peace. Fifteen minutes it had arrived at the deck chair
stage, when from the companion
way emerged Henry McRae in white
flannels, his round face beaming and
paper in his hand.

"Say, folks let's take a real vacation for two days. I just got a beautiful slapstick comedy and we'll try it out. We'll just have time to do it before we reach San Francisco. Now,
Clifford, you and Bainbridge are rivals," etc.
Even the stokers heard the groan.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

How many smiles there could be
if folks would always say
"a helping hand today"
How many smiles there will be
My friend, when you and I
Have learned to practise what we wish
These other folks would try!

HOT WEATHER BEVERAGES.

For a simple hot-weather drink
which is wholesome and good if one
likes ginger, prepare a tablespoonful of good
ground ginger with four
of sugar well mixed and
a pint of cold water added, stir until well blended, add a piece of ice
and serve.

Carrant jelly which
one does not care to keep over makes
a most delicious drink when dissolved
in water and sugar added, also a bit
of crushed mint with ice.
Old Colonial Mint Cup—Steep in
sufficient hot water to extract the strength of a large bunch of fresh
mint, then add the juice of six or anges and two lemons. Meanwhile dissolve over hot water half an ounce
of gum arabic soaked in half a cupful

of cold water 20 minutes, add a cupful
of sugar and cook until it spins a thread. Pour this boiling hot over
the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs,
beaten until cold and smooth, stir in
the mint water and fruit juice. Dilute
to the required strength with carbonated water and serve in tumblers
with cracked ice.

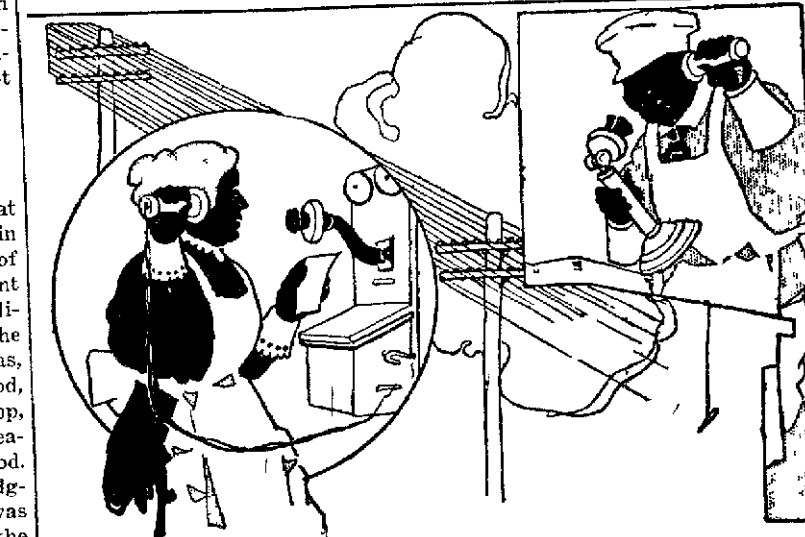

Ginger Cobbler.—Dice in a large
bowl one pared cucumber, two oranges and three lemons. Sprinkle with powdered sugar, a cupful, and
pour over a cup of preserved ginger
syrup, let stand on ice for several hours to chill and ripen, then add a cupful of cold sugar syrup and two quarts of ginger ale. Place a block
of ice in a punch bowl, strain in the
punch and serve garnished with red raspberries.

Parfait Glace.—Blend thoroughly a
cupful of strained currant jelly, one
cupful of honey, one pint of lemon ale,
a ripe pineapple cut in dice and con-
fectioners' sugar to taste. Place on ice until serving time, then add three pints of carbonated water. Serve with crushed
ice from a tall tankard garnished with
the pineapple top and ox head cherries.

The Adventures of Kathlyn

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Illustrated by Pictures from the Moving Picture Production of the Selig Polyscope Co.

(Copyright by Harold MacGrath)

"He squats there." The Mohammedan stooped and touched the old mahout on the shoulder. Call off this sale and my master will make you rich." The old sunner gingerly felt of the speaker's cotton garb. "Ah! My master must be rich to dress thee in cotton. Where is your gold? Bid," satirically. Two thousand rupees!" shouted the professional seller. "I have no gold but my master will give 10,000 rupees for yonder maid Quick! Old fool, be quick!" "Be gone, thou beggar!" And the old man spat. "Memsahib," the Mohammedan called out in English, "do not look toward me, or all will be lost. I am Ali, Bruce Sahib's chief mahout; and we have believed you dead! Take care! I go to inform Ahmed Bruce Sahib has not returned." Kathlyn, when she heard that voice, shut her eyes. "Umballa, draw closer. There is a light here, but this half veiled collection of poise? The clearness of the skin, though dark, the roundness of the throat and arms. Three thousand rupees!" The old mahout purred and smoothed his palms together. Three thousand rupees, a rajah's ransom! He would own his elephant, his wife should ride in a gilded palanquin, and his children should wear shoes. Three thousand rupees! He folded his arms and walked gently to and fro. (To be Continued.)

THE EXPRESS IS IN THIS TOWN AND IN TO STAY

For Seventy-five years—three-quarters of a century—the express has been the right-hand of the shippers of Commercial America. The Express came to Clearfield, Pa., in 1869 and it came to stay. For 45 years it has been the right-hand of Commercial Clearfield, Pa.

It is here to stay. The other day when reports went out that the express companies might retire from business, a protest went up. From whom this protest—the express companies? No! The merchants of the country—shippers everywhere—petitioned Congress that no action be taken that might have the effect of forcing the express companies to retire. Commercial organizations all over the land have joined in this appeal to Washington.

For Seventy-fiveteen years in the past and for a good many more years in the future Express service will mean

Only the grass eating beasts came down to water that night, and Kathlyn understood by this that the men and the elephants were still in the stockade.

The following morning she went down to the stream to bathe, at the same time the parent leopards came for drink. They had not cared to seek their lair during the night on account of the fires, and, worrying over their cubs, they were not in the most agreeable mood.

Kathlyn saw their approach in time to reach her platform. They snarled about the tree, and the male climbed up as far as the platform. Kathlyn reached over with a stout club and clouted the brute on his tender nose.

A shot broke the silence and a bullet spat angrily against the tree trunk. Two cats fled immediately there came a squealing and trumpeting from the stockade.

This is what had happened. The chief mahout had discovered the cubs and had taken them into the stockade just as another hunter had espied the parent leopards. The rifle shot had frightened one of the wild elephants. With a mighty plunge he had broken the chain which held him prisoner to the decoy elephant and pushed through the rotten stockade, heading straight for the river.

Kathlyn saw his bulk as it crashed straight through the brush. It shuffled directly toward her tree. The ground about was of clay, merging into sand as it sloped toward the river. The frantic runaway slipped, crushed against the tree trunk, recovered himself, and went splashing into the water.

Kathlyn was flung headlong and only the water saved her from severe bodily harm. When she recovered her senses she was surrounded by a group of very much astonished Mohammedans.

They jabbered and gesticulated to one another and she was conducted to the stockade. She understood but two words—"Allaha" and "slave."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Slave Market.

Having decided upon the fate of Kathlyn, the natives set about recapturing the wild elephant. It took the best part of the morning. When this was accomplished the journey to Allaha was begun. But for the days of peace and quiet of the wilderness and the consequent hardness of her flesh, Kathlyn would have suffered greatly. Half the time she was compelled to walk. There were no howdahs, and it was a difficult feat to sit back of the mahout. The rough skin of the elephant had the same effect upon the calves of her legs that sandpaper would have had. Sometimes she stumbled and fell, and was rudely jerked to her feet. Only the day before they arrived was she relieved in any way, she was given a litter, and in this manner she entered the hateful city.

On the way to the slave mart they passed under the shadow of the grim prison walls of the palace. The elephants veered off here into a side street, toward the huge square where horses and cattle and elephants were bought and sold. The litter in charge of the chief mahout, proceeded to the slave mart. Kathlyn glanced at the wall wondering. Was her father alive? Was he in some black cell behind that crumbling masonry?

Even as she sent a last lingering look at the prison the prisoner within his head buried in his thin, wasted hands, beheld her in a vision—but in a happy, joyous vision, busy about the living room of the bungalow.

And far away a younger man beheld a vision as very tenderly he gazed at Kathlyn's discarded robe and resumed his determined quest. Often, standing beyond his evening fires, he would ask the silence, "Kathlyn, where are you?" Even then he was riding fast toward Allaha.

A slave mart is a rare thing these days, but at the time these scenes were being enacted there existed many of them here and there across the face of the globe. Men buy and sell men and women these times—on sighted so they say—but they do it by legal contract or from vile hiding places.

Allaha had been a famous mart in its prime. It had drawn the agents of princes from all over India. Persia, Beloochistan, Afghanistan, and even southern Russia had been rife of their beauties to adorn the zenanas of the slothful Hindu princes.

The slave mart in the capital town of Allaha stood in the center of the bazaars, a great square platform with a roof, but open on all four sides. Here the slaves were exhibited, the poor things intended for dalliance and those who were to struggle and sweat and die under the overseer's lash.

Every fortnight a day was set aside for the business of the mart. Owners and prospective buyers met, chewed betel nut, smoked their hookahs, sipped coffee and tea and exchanged the tattle of the hour. It was as much an amusement as a business, indeed it was the oriental idea of a club, and much the same things were discussed.

All about there were barkers, and fruit sellers, and bangle wallas (for slave girls should have rings of rupee silver about their ankles and wrists), and solemn Brahmins, and men who painted red and ochre caste marks on one's forehead, and ash-covered fakirs with withered hands, Nautch girls, girls from the bazaars, petty jewellers, kites and red-headed vultures—this being a proper place for them.

The chief mahout purchased for Kathlyn a beautiful sari, or veil, which partially concealed her face and hair.

"Chalu!" he said, touching Kathlyn's shoulder whenever she lagged for they had dispensed with the litter. "Go on!"

She understood. Outwardly she appeared passive enough, but her soul was on fire and her eyes as brilliant as those of the circling, swooping kites, watching for that moment which was to offer some loophole. On through the noisy bazaar, the object of many a curious remark, sometimes insulted by the painted women at the windows, sometimes jeered at by the idlers around the merchants' booths.

It seemed to her, however, that a film of steel had grown over her nerves. Nothing startled her, she sensed only the watchfulness she had often noted in the captives at the farm.

At length they came out into the busy mart. The old mahout congratulated himself upon the docility of his find. It would stiffen the bidding to announce that she was gentle. He even went so far as to pat her on the shoulder. The film did not cover all her nerves, so it would seem the patted shoulder was vulnerable. She winced for she read clearly enough what was in the mind back of that touch.

She had made her plans. To the man who purchased her she would assume a meekness of spirit in order to lull his watchfulness. To the man who purchased her Kathlyn Hare! She laughed. The old man behind her nodded approvingly hearing the sound but not sensing its import. Ah when the moment came when the fool who bought her started to lead her home she would beguile him and at the first sign of carelessness she would trust to her heels. She knew that she was going to run as never a woman run before, back to the bosom of the jungle who at least made no effort to molest her so long as she kept out of their way.

Wild and beautiful she was as the old mahout turned her over to a professional seller.

"Circassian!"

"From the north!"

"A bride from the desert!"

"A yellow hair!"

"A daughter of the north seas!"

The old mahout squatted close by and rubbed his hands. He would be a rich man that night, bags of rupees, a well thatched house to cover his gray hairs till that day they placed him on the pyre at the burning ghat. The gods were good.

Durga Ram known familiarly as Umballa, at this hour came forth into the sunshine, brooding. He was not in a happy frame of mind. Many things lay heavy upon his soul, but among these things there was not one named remorse. To have brought about all these failures, this thought irked him most. Here was a crown almost within reach of his greedy fingers, the water to Tantalus. To have underestimated this yellow haired young woman, he who knew women so well—thru lay the bitter sting. He had been too impetuous, he should have waited till all her fears had been allayed. That spawn of Silva, the military, was insolent again, and rupees to cross their palms were scarce. Whether had she blown? Was she dead? Was she alive?

The white hunter had not returned to his camp yet but the sly Ahmed was there. The perpetual gloom on the face of the latter was reassuring to Umballa. Ahmed's master had not found her. To wring the white man's heart was something he dared not put him out of the way, too many knew.

And the Council was beginning to grow uneasy. How long could he hold them in leash?

What a woman! As magnificent as the daughter of Piroz shah of Delhi. Fear she knew not. At one moment she loved her with his whole soul, at another he hated her, longed to get her into his hands again, to wreak his vengeance upon her for the humiliation she had by wit and courage heaped upon him. "I am ready!" He could hear it yet. When they had laid her away to the ordeals—"I am ready!" A woman, and not afraid to die!

Money! How to get it! He could not plunge his hand into the treasury, there were too many about, too many tongues. But Colonel Hare knew where the silver basket lay hidden heaped with gold and precious stones, and torture could not wring the hiding place from him. May he be damned to the nethermost hell! Let him, Durga Ram, but bury his lean hands in that treasure and Naraka swallow Allaha and all its kings! Rubies and pearls and emeralds and a far country to idle in, to be feted in, to be fawned upon for his riches!

And Ramabal and his wife, Pundita, let them beware, let them remain wisely in their house and meddle not with affairs of state.

"A thousand rupees!"

Umballa looked up with a start. Unconsciously he had wandered into the slave mart. He shrugged and would have passed on but for the strange, unusual figure standing on the platform. A golden haired woman with neck and arms like Chinese bronze and dressed in a skirt of grass? He paused.

"Two thousand rupees!"

What! Jeered the professional seller. For an hour from paradise? O ye of weak hearts, what is this I hear? Two thousand rupees—for an hour fit to dwell in the zenana of heaven?

A keeneyed Mohammedan edged closer to the platform. He stared and sucked his breath. He found himself pulled two ways. He had no money, but he had knowledge.

Who sells this maiden? he asked. Moh unmed Ghori? Which is he?

A NEW KIND OF POLITICS THAT IS WINNING VOTES

How Pinchot and Lewis Go Through the Counties Meeting
the Citizens Face to Face and Discussing the Issues in Every Town and Village.

ROBERT D. TOWNE TELLS OF TRIP THROUGH COAL REGIONS

He Describes Great Impression Made on People by Washington
Party Candidates and Their Gospel of Clean Government.

By Robert D. Towne, Editor of the Scranton Daily News.

From five o'clock yesterday morning until nine-thirty last night I witnessed a new kind of politics at work in the state of Pennsylvania. Every body knows the old kind, the kind that has become a burden and a reproach to every community, the kind that plans to win by deception

GIFFORD PINCHOT

government and common welfare—that was the new kind of politics and politicians which I saw and heard.

Gifford Pinchot and William Draper Lewis are the politicians. They talked all day about making Pennsylvania a better place for all the men, women and children who live in it. I wish I could describe Pinchot and Lewis without appearing to flatter them. The standpatters are saying Pinchot isn't heavy enough for United States senator. Physically he isn't as heavy as the present senator. He doesn't size up to Boies Penrose in avoirdupois. Perhaps a change to lighter-weight senatorial stuff would be a good thing. I think I know the real light-weight when I see him—and the Lord knows I have seen a lot. This talk about Pinchot being under senatorial dimensions is one of those lies which are set afloat by the gang to defeat the men they fear. Roosevelt was a drunkard—and Pinchot isn't quite big enough for the senatorial job.

Well, what makes a man genuinely big? First of all, he must be an honest man. Then he must be sincere. Add a sane and cultured intelligence. Then add thorough and exact information. Finally, experience and achievement. Pinchot has more horse sense than any one of the fifty men I have heard repeat the insane statement that he isn't big enough for senator. He has courage of the fearless kind without vanity. He is one of the best informed men I know. He is honest and sincere as all clear, wholesome men and women are honest. He has accomplished more in a big public way than almost any other man in our public life. And Pinchot is able, a far stronger man in every way than Boies Penrose.

And what about William Draper Lewis? One of the intellectually great men of the country, for years the teacher of lawyers and one of the best equipped constitutional experts in the United States. The men who are belittling Pinchot and Lewis are men who put Tener and Penrose in office! I do not mean to be sarcastic nor am I casting any reflections on Governor Tener, but to be quite truthful it must be said that the belittlers of Pinchot and Lewis are self-indicted by the simple fact that they find no fault with our baseball Governor and our Standard Oil senator.

I saw something else new and strange yesterday. Pinchot stood in the middle of the road at Mayfield talking with two men just out of the mines. He was telling them that if they voted for him for United States senator they could trust him to stick to his principles. No man in Pennsylvania ever voted for a United States senator until this year. The rule of the people is already here. And so I saw a man aspiring to the highest office in the government, not down in Philadelphia hanging round the boss, not buzzing round the legislators to see how many votes he could control, but up in the street in Mayfield talking to his political masters, two miners. The people is now the Boss.

In Forest City Pinchot and Lewis stood in the street and talked to a little crowd on the sidewalk. It was early in the day. The usual varied village throng moved back and forth. These men, with a note of sincerity as unmistakable as it was novel in political speech making, told the little group they wanted to make Pennsylvania a better place for the people. They wanted a better child labor law. They wanted a workmen's compensation law. They wanted home rule for every community. They wanted to take the state out of the control of the corporations and give it back to the people. They were not agitators, not reckless overturners of society. Just patient pleaders for a square deal, for fair and honest treatment of the people.

And they put their new political gospel across. The people begin to see the truth. They listen earnestly, attentively. The rule of the people is here. Look out for Pinchot and Lewis, Mr. Standpatter. There is a new political Boss in Pennsylvania. The people are coming into their own.

For Forest-Fire Workers.

A special type of steel windmill tower has been adopted as the standard lookout tower for forest fire lookout purposes. The platform on top of the tower is inclosed to protect the lookout from sun and wind, and is large enough to provide room for his bed and working equipment.

Old Trees Raise Farm Values.

Well grown trees about the farm-house give it character as nothing else can do. Every older farm-house has them if the owner has not cut them down. If one wants to sell his farm, patriarchal trees work toward high prices. In the immediate vicinity of the house deciduous trees are preferable to evergreens, especially in winter.—Farm and Fireside.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning scalding sensation and is very pro-irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

Matter of Necessity.

IS NAPOLEON LAJOIE ON TOBOGGAN SLIDE

Miserable Showing This Year of The Erstwhile Slugger

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, July 22—Is Napoleon Lajoie, of the Naps, slipping? Has Father Time at last dimmed the batting eye of the man who ever will rank as one of the greatest sluggers in baseball history? Is the final curtain soon to be rung down on this star of 19 years?

These are the questions that agitate fandom more than any other just now, and there is none who doesn't hope that the batting slump of the veteran is but temporary and that instead of his star setting soon it will continue to blaze forth in the major league firmament for many years to come.

But the fact remains that Lajoie to date has made a more miserable showing at the bat than in any year since 1895 when he broke into the big league and set it on fire by his terrific batting.

Lajoie, according to the latest records, is about 50 points shy of the .300 mark, and he seems unable to "hit-em-where-they-ain't" as in other years. The ball no longer whistles from off his bat with bullet speed, as in the old days, and he no longer is ripping boards off fences with his terrific drives. Illness may have something to do with the slump, but many fear that Time has set its hand on the Cleveland wonder, and the days of his usefulness as a major leaguer are numbered.

Lajoie began the season with a grand batting average of .351 for 2112 games—the best record ever compiled by anyone over such a stretch of years. Wagner, of Pittsburgh, who had been in the majors 17 years up to the beginning of the season, had a grand average of .344 for 2282 games, while "Old Pop" Anson, during his 22 years as a big league star, compiled an average of .377 for 2250 games. If Lajoie fails to finish over the .300 mark this year it will reduce his grand average by several points, but it still will be remarkable enough to stand for many years to come. Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson have a chance to smash it—but will they be able to stand the big league pace for 18 years? And if they do, can they continue to hit at a clip that will give them an average of .351 for 18 years.

Insulting a butcher seems to be quite a crime in Detroit. Ty Cobb was a favorite back in the Michigan town until he rushed into a butcher shop and soaked a butcher upon the bean. Right away the whole darned town resented it. Ty lost his popularity instantly. The fans didn't care whether he jumped to the Feds, was traded to the Yankees or was shipwrecked on a cannibal island. Ty, by soaking a butcher, had in their minds, committed a heinous crime. Detroit must eat. And butchers supply meat. What if Ty had soaked the butcher so hard that the butcher would have been laid by for several months? Horrible thought. The Detroit neighborhood infested by that particular butcher would have had to go meatless. Shudders!

And so rather than submit that butcher and other meat dispensers to the danger of being soaked by the excitable Tyrus, the town has decided that it can get along without its baseball star. Detroit used to love Ty, but when the presence of Ty imperils the well-being of butchers—well, bye bye, Ty.

Hughey Jennings, who manages the team that owns the player that soaked the butcher, will be dreaming pennant dreams again if Smithson, a south-paw pitcher whom he recently secured, performs as well for the Tigers as he did in the minors.

Jennings got Smithson for $2750 from the Clinton, Illinois, team in the Central association. Smithson won 6 out of the ten games in which he participated, losing three of the four because of miserable support. He secured the title "Strike Out" King, because he struck out 98 batters in the 10 games—an average of nearly 10 men to a game.

Crews that lose boat races, fighters who fail to win in championship fights and golfers who fail to grab medals no longer need to worry about inventing alibis. The "experts" in those particular lines are doing all the ablying these days—and they leave nothing undone to excuse their erroneous predictions.

Reading the morning after the night before" story composed by an "expert" whose "sure winner" rushed among the also rans, is affording the general public almost as much pleasure these days as they got through the medium of a minstrel show in the old days.

A person addicted to the gambling habit slipped us the tip the other day that the surest way to make some easy money was to find out who the "expert" figures as a "sure winner" and then to bet the other way. But we aren't in accord with the tipster as to it being an absolutely sure way. Some of these days one of the "experts" may make a mistake and actually name the winner.

PLEASANT OUTING

Woodland Ladies Have a Delightful Time at Home of Freeman Shope.

On Thursday last a jolly party of Woodland ladies drove over to the Knobs, a distance of 14 miles, and spent the day with Mrs. Freeman Shope. All enjoyed the outing immensely, especially the delicious dinner and supper prepared by that most hospitable lady. Those present were: Mrs. Ashley Stewart and baby, Mrs. John Gingery, Mrs. Ralph Redifer and Teddy, Mrs. Owen Duffy, Mrs. Ashley Soult, Mrs. Charles Stevens, Mrs. John Falkner, Mrs. George Snyder, Mrs. Alex Dugan, Mrs. James Palmer and Mrs. Ulyssius Walker.

IMPROVED SCREENS

Pictures at New Opera House to be Shown More Clearly.

The manager of the New opera house has secured for use in showing pictures the Mirroroid screens, which are a great improvement over the screens, which are a great improvement over the screens formerly used. By the use of these screens the pictures are made clearer and brighter, the projection of the pictures being wonderfully improved.

With these screens all of the minute details of the picture which are lost to the observer when the ordinary curtain is used are shown. This new screen is sure to please patrons of the movies at the New opera house.

Editor in Name Only.

Fictitious "editors" are regular members of the staff of many Russian newspapers. Some time ago the so called "responsible editor" of a labor journal was charged under a statute relating to the incitement of class enmity. He pleaded not guilty, and it turned out that he could not even read and could only write his own name with much difficulty. He had been promised $15 monthly for giving his name as responsible editor of the paper. Although the journal was issued in St. Petersburg, the "editor" worked in Riga as a factory hand and was actually serving a sentence for robbery when the charge was brought against him.

Close Call.

"Hold on!" cried the proud young father as the minister was about to proceed. "Before the baby is christened I want to change his name." "What is the trouble?" the good man asked. "Ebenezer is a good name." "No matter. We'll call him Harold. I've just heard that Uncle Ebenezer, the old fool! has married a woman who is young enough to be his daughter."—Judge.

Poor Adam.

"If Adam had lived till now," says Mr. Snowden, "and had worked hard at honest labor the whole time, and had been a thrifty man withal, he would not have had an income like some of those enjoyed today." Mr. Snowden is apparently presuming that Adam's wife would have lived as long as her husband.—Punch.

Distribution.

The longer I live the more I am persuaded that the gifts of Providence are more equally distributed than we are apt to think. Among the poor so little is enjoyed so much, and among the rich so much is enjoyed so little.—Margaret Bottoms.

What Noah Overlooked.

If Noah had swatted those two flies as they started up the ark's gangplank he would have saved a heap of trouble.

STRIKING USE OF FLOUNCING.

Machine embroidery flouncing in colors on a cotton crape is beautifully developed in this afternoon frock for a fashionable summer toilet. The vogue for ribbon is indicated in the skirt and the sash, which is draped generously down the back.

BEAUTIFUL AFTERNOON FROCK

This charming gown was built of sheer handkerchief linen elaborately embroidered by hand. The sash of embroidered linen is the salient feature of this up to the minute frock.

CAMISOLES AND CHEMI-VESTS

Camisoles, which are brassieres made with the little shoulder caps, encircle the body with a tiny frill of net above, not reaching above the arms, with ribbons over the shoulders. This lace is fastened to a narrow piece of doubled net, with beading through which ribbon is run. Very thin lengthwise strips of embroidery may form a camisole, with lace three inches wide across the top. They fasten on the left side. Little chemi-vests to be worn next to the flesh are made of nainsook, crape, china silk, lawn, etc., and are twenty-four to twenty-nine inches long and without an inch of extra material.

Y. M. C. A. FOR OSCEOLA

Option of Fine Site for Building Has Been Secured.

At the close of the Johnson evangelistic meetings at Osceola it was suggested that citizens organize a Young Men's Christian association in the town. The idea was received with enthusiasm among those who know the great good such association does in a community.

Committees were appointed and probable sites were discussed. An option on the handsome residence of the late George M. Brisbin was secured and a fund of several thousand dollars subscribed toward the carrying out of the project.

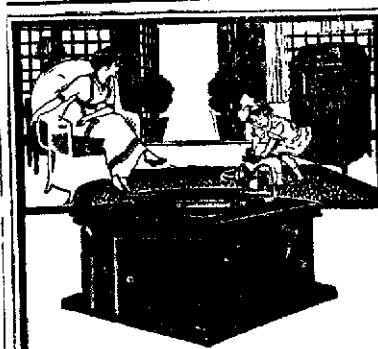

The people who attended the evangelistic meetings are enthusiastic over the proposition, and there is little doubt that the enterprise will be consummated. It will require about $8000 to finance the project.

No Street Cars Here.

A lady with some style about her detained from the Tyrone & Clearfield train the other day at Market street and asked to be directed to the street cars, as she wished to go the Dimeling. She was very much surprised to learn that such an up-to-date town as Clearfield has no street cars and that she would have to walk to the Dimeling, one square distant.

Hoots and Cheers.

When court adjourned the lawyers and others rushed inside the bar, giving rousing cheers for Labor and shaking his hand.

As M. Caillaux left the palace of justice the crowd hooted or cheered, according to their political opinions. The ex-premier hastily entered a taxi-cab and drove off.

An interesting bit of testimony produced yesterday was that of President Poincare, whose deposition was taken by Judge Emile Forichon, the first president of the court of appeals.

This narrated how Caillaux, then minister of finance, called upon President Poincare on the day Calmette was killed and spoke about the probable publication in the Gigoar of letters between himself and Mme. Caillaux.

In the course of an excited talk, M. Caillaux exclaimed, according to the deposition: "If Calmette publishes the letters I will kill him."

MINERS UNION MAY BE SUED

Operators' Association Likely to Take Such Action

RESULT OF NUMEROUS STRIKES

Executive Committee Directs Gathering of Evidence in Cases—Declared That Mine Operators Have Been Damaged in the Amount of More Than $180,000 by Frequent Suspension of Work in Alleged Violation of Contract.

At the session of the executive committee of the Association of Bituminous Mine Operators of Central Pennsylvania, held at the Dimeling Tuesday, it was decided to move the offices of the association from Philadelphia to Clearfield. Rooms have been secured in the Kurtz building on Second street, and these will be fitted up and occupied by the local representatives of the association about August 1.

John C. Forsyth, Esq., was elected commissioner and secretary-treasurer of the association and will have charge of the offices here.

Will Gather Evidence.

The association directed its attorneys here, Messrs. Boulton & Forsyth, to gather evidence relating to strikes which have occurred among miners of district No. 2, with a view to bringing suit against the United Mine Workers of America of the district for damages.

There have been quite a number of strikes at the mines in the district in past year or two, and operators' association asserts, that many of these were in violation to the contracts entered into between the miners and operators.

Will Enforce Contracts.

It is stated that hereafter the operators will take the same stand taken by the miners and enforce the letter of all contracts. After the evidence required by the association has been procured suits may be brought against the miners' union. It is said by an official of the association that $180,000 would not cover the amount (Continued on 6th page.)

A SUCCESSFUL CONVENTION

County Sunday School Association Meets at Ramey

SEVERAL FINE SPEECHES MADE

Discussion of Questions Affecting the Work of Sunday Schools Was Interesting—Other News of the Mining Town in Southern Part of County.

District No. 8 of the Clearfield County Sabbath School association held a profitable convention in the Ramey M. E. church Tuesday afternoon and evening. Addresses were made by the following persons: Welcome, E. C. Davis; response, John Stoker; "What Does a Teacher Owe the Class?" Mrs. Chas. Snively; "How to Get Children into the Sunday School," W. P. Cornely; "How can we hold that boy?" Rev. John Mitchell; "Why do so few Sunday School Children attend Church?" H. A. Reed.

The following officers were elected for 1914-15: President, E. C. Davis, Ramey. Vice President, J. A. Shoff, Madera. Secretary, Miss Elizabeth Hopkins, Ramey.

Treasurer, John Davis, Madera. Superintendents of departments were elected as follows:

Elementary, Miss Mae Cornely, of Madera. Missionary, Miss Ether Mills, Ramey. Temperance, Russel Snively, Ramey.

O. A. B. C., W. P. Cornely, Madera. Home, Mrs. J. M. Cornely, Madera. Normal, Mrs. Maud Gallagher, Smith Mills.

The next convention of this district will be held at Janesville M. E. church on Wednesday, June 24, 1915.

WANTED IN THE JAIL

Some Person Disturbs the Slumbers Sheriff McCloskey.

About 2 o'clock this morning Sheriff McCloskey and several girls who work in the sheriff's house part of the jail heard somebody trying to enter the prison. The noise awoke the inmates of the house, and the sheriff investigated, but could find nobody.

From the racket the fellow made it was evident that he was either anxious to get inside of the jail or had mistaken the bastille for a hotel. That anybody should attempt to break into the jail surprises the sheriff, who has heretofore had trouble in preventing those within from breaking out.

DEATH OF A MOST ESTIMABLE LADY

Mrs. Margaret Troutman Passes Away After Long Illness

Mrs. Margaret Troutman, one of Clearfield's oldest citizens, died at her home on Cherry street, Saturday at 12 o'clock. Mrs. Troutman was born in Bellefonte, January 5, 1830. In 1851 she married John Troutman and came to Clearfield to live. Mr. Troutman died two years ago.

Mrs. Troutman is survived by one brother, Thomas Herd, of Altoona, 89 years of age, and her niece, Miss Frances Shay, whom Mrs. Troutman adopted when she was 9 months old. She had been failing slowly for several years and passed away in a quiet and peaceful manner, retaining her sweet, patient disposition until the end.

The funeral was held on Monday at 3:00 from her residence on Cherry street, and interment was made in the old cemetery. The funeral was in charge of Dr. H. R. Bender, of the Trinity church, of which deceased was a faithful and consistent member.

Mrs. Troutman was a lovable woman who had a host of friends. The patience she displayed during her long years of suffering attested to the sincerity of her Christian faith, and the testimony of her many friends is not needed to prove that she was one of Clearfield's most estimable women.

Buffalo, July 22—Monday a marriage license was issued at Niagara Falls to William E. Heverling and Miss Ada V. Young, both of Clearfield. Tuesday at noon Thomas Smith, of Clearfield, and Miss Alpha Garsard, of Big Run, Jefferson county, took a license.

Both couples are now on their wedding trip.

Caillaux Trial Arouses Political Factions to a Frenzy

PALACE GUARDS REDOUBLED

Defense May Enter Plea of Temporary Insanity in Mme. Caillaux Case—Her Husband Gives Testimony Amid Excitement—Says He Failed to Realize Effect of Calumnies Upon His Wife.

(By International News Service) Paris, July 22—The force of republican guards has been redoubled at the palace of justice to prevent further outbreaks of political factionalism at the trial of Mme. Caillaux.

Seething crowds began gathering hours before the third day's session. Mobs, headed by Leon Faguet and other Royalist leaders, indulged in howling parades against former minister Caillaux.

There is a possibility of the defense switching today to temporary insanity. Charges may be brought against Caillaux, as the result of his secret correspondence on Germany's regime, while he was in office, which damaged France in the Moroccan crisis.

Caillaux on Stand.

Joseph Caillaux held the court for two intense hours yesterday, testifying in defense of his wife, who sat in the prisoner's enclosure, charged with the killing of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, on March 16 last.

The appearance of M. Caillaux was hardly less dramatic than that of Mme. Caillaux Monday. The former premier, still one of the most powerful men in France, dominated the proceedings, imposing upon them his personality and uncommon gifts of leadership.

"I accuse myself," he cried in the climax. "I committed a fault. I should myself have acted; but absorbed by public affairs, I failed to realize the ravages Calmette's calumnies had made on the soul of my wife."

M. Caillaux spoke as if in the chamber, his voice of high tenor, softened in quality, sometimes rising to falsetto in moments of excitement. He gesticulated freely, pointing a singularly long forefinger as he addressed the judges or the jury, and occasionally it moved in the direction of his wife.

Almost a Riot.

He related what he knew of the cause of the shooting of Calmette and then asked to be confronted with Louis Latzarus, one of the members of the Figaro staff, who had previously testified that Calmette had told him he had diplomatic document important enough absolutely to crush Caillaux.

The two men were in the wildest excitement as they stood beside the bar, and appeared to restrain themselves with difficulty from springing at each other.

Latzarus refused to specify the contents of the documents unless forced to do so, as their divulgence would constitute a grave danger to France. He was then heard to say something about "the chief whom I loved and whom Caillaux assassinated."

The courtroom broke into a violent uproar; the scene recalled the famous Zola trial. Caillaux shouted above the din:

"I cannot tolerate such language. I (Continued on 6th page.)"

THAT DEER CASE

Superior Court Says Law of 1909 Was Not Repealed.

In its opinion and decree in the case of Dr. Dickson, charged with killing a deer the horns of which were not visible above the hair, the indictment against whom was quashed by Judge Searle, specially sitting in the Clearfield county court, the superior court decides that the law of 1913 did not repeal the law of 1909, but merely amended it without removing the restriction relative to the horns of a deer being visible above the hair.

The court quotes judicial authority for its decision and says that the change of wording in the act of 1913 does not affect the fact that the horns of a deer must be visible above the hair to make its killing legal. The statutory provision of the act of 1909 still remains and it is still a penal offense to kill a deer, the horns of which are not visible above the hair. The case of Dr. Dickinson will therefore be tried before the Clearfield county court at a future session.

Seeks Relief from Asthma.

Miss Mildred, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Ellenberger, of West Market street, has gone to Luthersburg to spend a few weeks in the hope that the change of altitude may bring her relief from her affliction, which is caused by asthma. She is a guest at the Carlisle hotel at that place.

BOLD ROBBERS IN MADERA DISTRICT

Safe in Postoffice Blown Open and Robbers Shot at

For some time it has been believed that a gang of robbers has made its headquarters in that section of Clearfield county in the vicinity of Madera. A number of buildings have been entered and some property stolen, but the identity of the thieves has not yet been discovered.

Monday night the safe in the postoffice at Madera was blown open. The citizens heard the noise of the explosion and hastened to the scene. Several men were seen running from the building, and one citizen fired a shot at the fleeing burglars, but without known result.

It is said that several suspicious persons went to a hotel in one of the towns after the robberies and paid for what they ordered with pennies, presumably the loot from some place that had been entered.

The citizens of that section talk of organizing a vigilance committee to run down the gang, which is evidently made up of desperate characters.

MURDERER OF POLICE CHIEF COMMITS SUICIDE IN JAIL

(By International News Service)

Boston, July 22—Lawrence Robinson, alias "Diamond Chip" on trial charged with the murder of Police Inspector Norton, suicided by cutting his throat and the artery in his arm with a sharpened metal arch support of his shoe, in the Charles street jail this morning. Every effort was made to save him, but he died shortly afterward.

Robinson was born at Washington Court House, Ohio, and was aged 32 years.

SUITS AGAINST NEW HAVEN RAILROAD WILL START SOON

(By International News Service)

Washington, July 22—The department of justice authorized the statement that, following an equity suit against the New Haven railroad, ordered by President Wilson yesterday, will almost certainly be filed in New York within the next 48 hours. The criminal proceedings against the directors probably will not be started for some days yet. The government officials are preparing for the great est "malefactor-of-great-wealth" battle in the history of the nation.

It is intimated that every effort will be made to set aside the immunity supposedly granted to Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven, in exchange for his testimony before the interstate commerce commission.

WHY?

Why worry over things which are
not likely to happen when you can be
glad over something that has happened?

Good evening! Don't imagine that
the ghosts of the flies you swatted
will return to haunt you.

After the army worm, what?

That man Carranza is talking like a prospective candidate for president of Mexico.

Huerta says President Wilson helped
to make him famous. But Huerta
made himself infamous by his course
in Mexico.

Martin Brumbaugh might declare
that he is against Penrose with as
much sincerity as the drunkard might
say he is against a lamppost—because he has to lean on it.

Washington, Pa., and New Castle
might give other towns some interesting history of automobile factory
promoters, if they can talk of such
matters without getting angry.

We are not personally acquainted
with D. W. Anderson, but we wish to say right here that we wish Clearfield
had one hundred such enterprising
citizens as Mr. Anderson is proving
himself to be in his plan to give the
town a number of new houses.

THE WIFE BEATER.

Cases in which recreant husbands
have been haled into court to answer
the charge of wife desertion are not uncommon in Clearfield county. In
some of these cases the wife herself
may be responsible for her husband's
dereliction, for some of the females of
the species have ways about them
which drive the best of husbands to
forsake home and associations in the search for peace. In most of the cases coming before the Clearfield
county court, however, the evidence
of the husband's culpability is such

that the usual penalty is prescribed.
When to the offense of wife deser-
tion is added the crime of wife beat-
ing it is difficult for attendants at
court to regret that the law does not
provide adequate punishment for the brutal husband. A case of this kind
came before the court this week, a
frail, broken hearted woman who had
endured for years the cowardly attacks of her husband until she could
stand no more, appealed to the court
for relief. None of those who heard
this prematurely old woman tell her
pitiful story to the court while her
husband sat by, sneering at her tale
of brutality on his part could help
feeling that it would have done them
good to have that fellow out in the
woods alone for a quarter of an hour,
that they might reason with him with
a club.

Such a man as that is not punish-
ed by being sent to jail for a few months. He cannot be reasoned with,
for his sense of justice is dulled and
his respect for the law is deficient. If
this class of wife beaters were to be
compelled to work on some public improvement or break stone for use on
roads or streets, the proceeds of his
labor to be given to his wife and
children, he might be made of some
use to the state and his family. This would be practical punishment, such
as the brutal wife beater deserves.

A CAMPAIGN OF LIES.

That the Penrose machine is desperate because it sees the inevitable defeat of Senator Penrose for reelec-
tion is evident from the numerous
falsehoods which the publicity bureau
financed by Penrose is circulating
through the state. No lie is so base-
less that it is not seized upon by the
tools of the machine to offer to the
voters.

One of the lies so industriously circulated a week ago was that William
Draper Lewis, Washington candidate
for governor would withdraw in behalf of Vance McCormick. So palpably
false was this rumor that none of the
voters of the Washington party placed
any credence in it. William Draper
Lewis, instead of being ready and
willing to withdraw in favor of some
other candidate, has started on an-
other campaigning tour, and will remain on the stump until the day before the election, telling the people
what they may expect if they reelect
Penrose.

The Washington party was never
stronger in the state than it is at this
time, and it is gaining strength daily. A large majority of the people
of Pennsylvania are opposed to the election of Boise Penrose, because
they know he is the agent of special
privilege in the United States senate.
These voters know that Penrose can-
not be defeated by any other candidate than Gifford Pinchot. The hope-
lessly split Democracy cannot defeat
Penrose. The only hope, therefore, of
removing Penrose from a position
which he has used to further the interests of beneficiaries of special privilege is by electing Gifford Pinchot
to the United States senate.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

A delightful picnic was held at
camp Golden-Rod Friday afternoon in
honor of Miss Dorothy Tompkins, of Ridgway. A pleasant time was spent
in playing games, after which delicious refreshments were served. The party consisted of Misses Nina Lucas,
Esther Knepp, Grace Underwood,
Grace Stewart, Mary Ellen Knepp,
Kathryn Musser, Vera Wisner, Elea-
nor Martin and Marian Underwood.
Chaperones, Mrs. Tompkins, of Ridg-
way and Mrs. Knepp. The party was conveyed to and from the camp by the genial Mr. Knepp.

The Very Best Flour That
Money Can Buy
BIG LOAF

IN THE MOVIES

The thirteenth series of "Lucile
Love" will be shown at the New opera
house this evening. Taking advantage
of Loubeque's quarrel with Thompson,
his butler, Lucile picks up the price-
less documents from the floor where
they have fallen. She runs out of the house and escapes in Loubeque's auto
and makes a wild dash for the American frontier. Loubeque pursues her in another car, the way is rough and Loubeque can better understand the
handling of a car under such conditions than the girl. Lucile's chauffeur
loses his head and the car plunges
over the edge of the cliff into a terrible abyss. When she gains consciousness Lucile finds herself being
taken care of by Loubeque, the papers
are gone and she is just where she
was in the beginning. The futility of
the attempt dawns upon Lucile and
unasked she agrees to give up the
fight and returns to San Francisco.
In her heart she has begun to admire
Loubeque—his steadfastness to a purpose which could actuate only a man
of intense character and brilliant
imagination. Though he dare not admit it to himself Loubeque has a feeling for Lucile which is far greater
than a passing admiration for her determination, bravery and energy in
fighting apparently insurmountable
obstacles.

Loubeque however, has not lost sight
of his object, to ruin the man who
shook his sweetheart and wrecked his life. And he proceeds as soon as he reaches home to do so. Lucile,
masquerading as a cabaret dancer, lis-
tens to him unfolding his plan to a comrade. Then an unexpected thing
happens. Lieutenant Gibson, Lucile's
lover, happens into the cafe and recognizes Lucile and will have nothing
to do with her and rushes from the
cafe.

People who enjoy a laughable comedy should not miss "The Triangle Marriage," which will be shown at
the New opera house this evening. It
is a series of laughable incidents from
beginning to end. Some one in past years said, "laugh and grow fat," and
the author of this comedy must have
had that saying in mind when he produced this photoplay. Daughter is a

sweet girl, but she has a strong will
of her own. Mother plans that she
marry Harry; father picks Johnny,
but she herself prefers Billy. A mild
war is declared when she suddenly
thinks of a way to solve the matter.

Promptly the mischievous maiden
writes two letters, one to Harry, telling him to disguise and come over
that evening and elope; the other to Johnny, telling him to dress as a wo-
man wearing a heavy veil and come
over for the same purpose. At the appointed hour father and mother each
feign sleep, each thinking that she
will elope with their favorite. The
two rivals elope together and are
married at the justice of the peace's
office while the daughter escapes with Billy.

"A Modern Fairy Tale" is a delightful play which is to be shown at the New opera house this evening. It is just the kind of story you will enjoy
after the other features of the evening.

Henry McRae, director of the "101
Bison" company, is declared by his
actors to be the hardest working man
in the world. They tell this story of
him. Coming back on the steamer
Mastonia from Hawaii, where the
company recently spent four months
making feature films of Hawaiian life
and scenery, the actors completed the
two reel film upon which they were working. Two more days still remained before the ship was to land at San Francisco. Two days of rest, no
work, no grease paint, no strenuous
jumps from fifty foot rigging into
angry waves. Nothing but lemonade,
deck chairs and peace. Fifteen minutes it had arrived at the deck chair
stage, when from the companion
way emerged Henry McRae in white
flannels, his round face beaming and
paper in his hand.

"Say, folks let's take a real vacation for two days. I just got a beautiful slapstick comedy and we'll try it
out. We'll just have time to do it before we reach San Francisco. Now,
Clifford, you and Bainbridge are riv-
als," etc.
Even the stokers heard the groan.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

How many smiles there could be
if folks would always say
"a helping hand today".
How many smiles there will be,
My friend, when you and I
Have learned to practise what we wish
These other folks would try!
—John P. Trowbridge.

HOT WEATHER BEVERAGES.

For a simple hot-weather drink
which is wholesome and good if one
likes ginger, prepare a tablespoonful of good
ground ginger with four
of sugar well mixed and
a pint of cold water added, stir until well blend-
ed, add a piece of ice
and serve.

Carrant jelly which
one does not care to keep over makes
a most delicious drink when dissolved
in water and sugar added, also a bit
of crushed mint with ice.

Old Colonial Mint Cup.—Steep in
sufficient hot water to extract the
strength of a large bunch of fresh
mint, then add the juice of six or anges and two lemons. Meanwhile
dissolve over hot water half an ounce
of gum arabic soaked in half a cupful

of cold water 20 minutes, add a cupful
of sugar and cook until it spins a
thread. Pour this boiling hot over
the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs,
beaten until cold and smooth, stir in
the mint water and fruit juice. Dilute
to the required strength with car-
bonated water and serve in tumblers
with cracked ice.

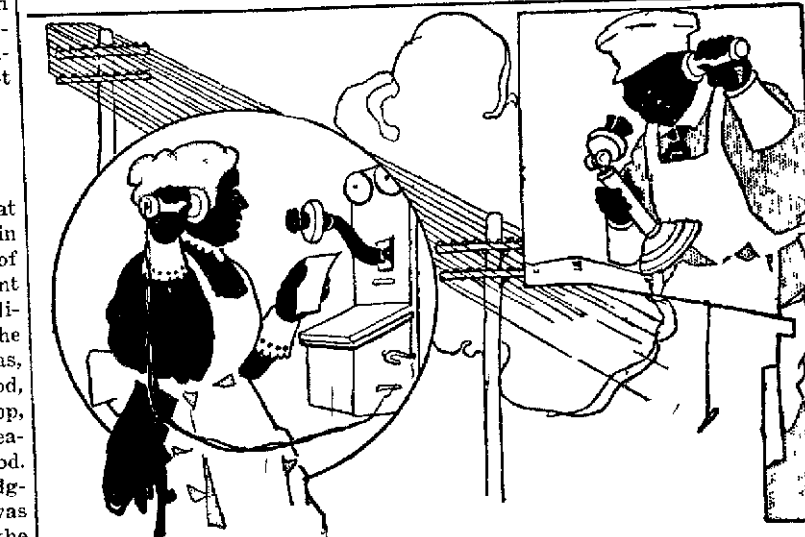

Ginger Cobbler.—Dice in a large
bowl one pared cucumber, two oranges and three lemons. Sprinkle
with powdered sugar, a cupful, and
pour over a cup of preserved ginger
syrup, let stand on ice for several
hours to chill and ripen, then add a
cupful of cold sugar syrup and two quarts of ginger ale. Place a block
of ice in a punch bowl, strain in the
punch and serve garnished with red
raspberries.

Parfait Glace.—Blend thoroughly a
cupful of strained currant jelly, one
cupful of honey, one pint of lemon ale,
a ripe pineapple cut in dice and con-
fectioners' sugar to taste. Place on ice until serving time, then add three pints of carbonated water. Serve with crushed
ice from a tall tankard garnished with
the pineapple top and ox head cherries.

"He squats there." The Mohammedan stooped and touched the old mahout on the shoulder. Call off this sale and my master will make you rich." The old sunner gingerly felt of the speaker's cotton garb. "Ah! My master must be rich to dress thee in cotton. Where is your gold? Bid," satirically.

Two thousand rupees!" shouted the professional seller. "I have no gold but my master will give 10,000 rupees for yonder maid Quick! Old fool, be quick!" "Be gone, thou beggar!" And the old man spat. "Memsahib," the Mohammedan called out in English, "do not look toward me, or all will be lost. I am Ali, Bruce Sahib's chief mahout; and we have believed you dead! Take care! I go to inform Ahmed Bruce Sahib has not returned."

Kathlyn, when she heard that voice, shut her eyes. "Umballa! draw closer. There is a light here but this half veiled collection of poise? The clearness of the skin, though dark, the roundness of the throat and arms. "Three thousand rupees!" The old mahout purred and smoothed his palms together. Three thousand rupees, a rajah's ransom! He would own his elephant, his wife should ride in a gilded palanquin, and his children should wear shoes. Three thousand rupees! He folded his arms and walked gently to and fro. (To be Continued.)

Only the grass eating beasts came down to water that night, and Kathlyn understood by this that the men and the elephants were still in the stockade.

The following morning she went down to the stream to bathe, at the same time the parent leopards came for drink. They had not cared to seek their lair during the night on account of the fires, and, worrying over their cubs, they were not in the most agreeable mood.

Kathlyn saw their approach in time to reach her platform. They snarled about the tree, and the male climbed up as far as the platform. Kathlyn reached over with a stout club and clouted the brute on his tender nose.

A shot broke the silence and a bullet spat angrily against the tree trunk. Two cats fled immediately there came a squealing and trumpeting from the stockade.

This is what had happened. The chief mahout had discovered the cubs and had taken them into the stockade just as another hunter had espied the parent leopards. The rifle shot had frightened one of the wild elephants. With a mighty plunge he had broken the chain which held him prisoner to the decoy elephant and pushed through the rotten stockade, heading straight for the river.

Kathlyn saw his bulk as it crashed straight through the brush. It shuffled directly toward her tree. The ground about was of clay, merging into sand as it sloped toward the river. The frantic runaway slipped, crushed against the tree trunk, recovered himself, and went splashing into the water.

Kathlyn was flung headlong and only the water saved her from severe bodily harm. When she recovered her senses she was surrounded by a group of very much astonished Mohammedans.

They jabbered and gesticulated to one another and she was conducted to the stockade. She understood but two words—"Allaha" and "slave."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Slave Market.

Having decided upon the fate of Kathlyn, the natives set about recapturing the wild elephant. It took the best part of the morning. When this was accomplished the journey to Allaha was begun. But for the days of peace and quiet of the wilderness and the consequent hardness of her flesh, Kathlyn would have suffered greatly. Half the time she was compelled to walk. There were no howdahs, and it was a difficult feat to sit back of the mahout. The rough skin of the elephant had the same effect upon the calves of her legs that sandpaper would have had. Sometimes she stumbled and fell, and was rudely jerked to her feet. Only the day before they arrived was she relieved in any way, she was given a litter, and in this manner she entered the hateful city.

On the way to the slave mart they passed under the shadow of the grim prison walls of the palace. The elephants veered off here into a side street, toward the huge square where horses and cattle and elephants were bought and sold. The litter in charge of the chief mahout, proceeded to the slave mart. Kathlyn glanced at the wall wondering. Was her father alive? Was he in some black cell behind that crumbling masonry?

Even as she sent a last lingering look at the prison the prisoner within his head buried in his thin, wasted hands, beheld her in a vision—but in a happy, joyous vision, busy about the living room of the bungalow.

And far away a younger man beheld a vision as very tenderly he gazed at Kathlyn's discarded robe and resumed his determined quest. Often, standing beyond his evening fires, he would ask the silence, "Kathlyn, where are you?" Even then he was riding fast toward Allaha.

A slave mart is a rare thing these days, but at the time these scenes were being enacted there existed many of them here and there across the face of the globe. Men buy and sell men and women these times—on sighted so they say—but they do it by legal contract or from vile hiding places.

Allaha had been a famous mart in its prime. It had drawn the agents of princes from all over India, Persia, Beloochistan, Afghanistan, and even southern Russia had been rife of their beauties to adorn the zenanas of the slothful Hindu princes.

The slave mart in the capital town of Allaha stood in the center of the bazaars, a great square platform with a roof, but open on all four sides. Here the slaves were exhibited, the poor things intended for dalliance and those who were to struggle and sweat and die under the overseer's lash.

Every fortnight a day was set aside for the business of the mart. Owners and prospective buyers met, chewed betel nut, smoked their hookahs, sipped coffee and tea and exchanged the tattle of the hour. It was as much an amusement as a business, indeed it was the oriental idea of a club, and much the same things were discussed.

All about there were barkers, and fruit sellers, and bangle wallas (for slave girls should have rings of rupee silver about their ankles and wrists), and solemn Brahmins, and men who painted red and ochre caste marks on one's forehead, and ash-covered fakirs with withered hands, Nautch girls, girls from the bazaars, peripatetic jewelers, kites and red-headed vultures—this being a proper place for them.

The chief mahout purchased for Kathlyn a beautiful sari, or veil, which partially concealed her face and hair.

"Chalu!" he said, touching Kathlyn's shoulder whenever she lagged for they had dispensed with the litter. "Go on!"

She understood. Outwardly she appeared passive enough, but her soul was on fire and her eyes as brilliant as those of the circling, swooping kites, watching for that moment which was to offer some loophole. On through the noisy bazaar, the object of many a curious remark, sometimes insulted by the painted women at the windows, sometimes jeered at by the idlers around the merchants' booths.

It seemed to her, however, that a film of steel had grown over her nerves. Nothing startled her, she sensed only the watchfulness she had often noted in the captives at the farm.

At length they came out into the busy mart. The old mahout congratulated himself upon the docility of his find. It would stiffen the bidding to announce that she was gentle. He even went so far as to pat her on the shoulder. The film did not cover all her nerves, so it would seem the patted shoulder was vulnerable. She winced for she read clearly enough what was in the mind back of that touch.

She had made her plans. To the man who purchased her she would assume a meekness of spirit in order to lull his watchfulness. To the man who purchased her Kathlyn Hare! She laughed. The old man behind her nodded approvingly hearing the sound but not sensing its import. Ah when the moment came when the fool who bought her started to lead her home she would beguile him and at the first sign of carelessness she would trust to her heels. She knew that she was going to run as never a woman run before, back to the bosom of the jungle who at least made no effort to molest her so long as she kept out of their way.

Wild and beautiful she was as the

old mahout turned her over to a professional seller.

"Circassian!"

"From the north!"

"A bride from the desert!"

"A yellow hair!"

"A daughter of the north seas!"

The old mahout squatted close by and rubbed his hands. He would be a rich man that night, bags of rupees, a well thatched house to cover his gray hairs till that day they placed him on the pyre at the burning ghat. The gods were good.

Durga Ram known familiarly as Umballa, at this hour came forth into the sunshine, brooding. He was not in a happy frame of mind. Many things lay heavy upon his soul, but among these things there was not one named remorse. To have brought about all these failures, this thought irked him most. Here was a crown almost within reach of his greedy fingers, the water to Tantalus. To have underestimated this yellow haired young woman, he who knew women so well—tho' he lay the bitter sting. He had been too impetuous, he should have waited till all her fears had been allayed. That spawn of Silva, the military, was insolent again, and rupees to cross their palms were scarce. Whether had she blown? Was she dead? Was she alive?

The white hunter had not returned to his camp yet but the sly Ahmed was there. The perpetual gloom on the face of the latter was reassuring to Umballa. Ahmed's master had not found her. To wring the white man's heart was something he dared not put him out of the way, too many knew.

And the Council was beginning to grow uneasy. How long could he hold them in leash?

What a woman! As magnificent as the daughter of Piroz shah of Delhi. Fear she knew not. At one moment she loved her with his whole soul, at another he hated her, longed to get her into his hands again, to wreak his vengeance upon her for the humiliation she had by wit and courage heaped upon him. "I am ready!" He could hear it yet. When they had laid her away to the ordeals—"I am ready!" A woman, and not afraid to die!

Money! How to get it! He could not plunge his hand into the treasury, there were too many about, too many tongues. But Colonel Hare knew where the silver basket lay hidden heaped with gold and precious stones, and torture could not wring the hiding place from him. May he be damned to the nethermost hell! Let him, Durga Ram, but bury his lean hands in that treasure and Naraka swallow Allaha and all its kings! Rubies and pearls and emeralds and a far country to idle in, to be feted in, to be fawned upon for his riches!

And Ramabal and his wife, Pundita, let them beware, let them remain wisely in their house and meddle not with affairs of state.

"A thousand rupees!"

Umballa looked up with a start. Unconsciously he had wandered into the slave mart. He shrugged and would have passed on but for the strange, unusual figure standing on the platform. A golden haired woman with neck and arms like Chinese bronze and dressed in a skirt of grass? He paused.

Two thousand rupees!"

What! jeered the professional seller. For an hour from paradise? O ye of weak hearts, what is this I hear? Two thousand rupees—for an hour fit to dwell in the zenana of heaven?

A keeneyed Mohammedan edged closer to the platform. He stared and sucked his breath. He found himself pulled two ways. He had no money, but he had knowledge.

Who sells this maiden? he asked. Moh unimed Ghori? Which is he?

A NEW KIND OF POLITICS THAT IS WINNING VOTES

How Pinchot and Lewis Go Through the Counties Meeting
 the Citizens Face to Face and Discussing the Issues in Every Town and Village.

ROBERT D. TOWNE TELLS OF TRIP THROUGH COAL REGIONS

He Describes Great Impression Made on People by Washington
 Party Candidates and Their Gospel of Clean Government.

By Robert D. Towne, Editor of the Scranton Daily News.

From five o'clock yesterday morning until nine-thirty last night I witnessed a new kind of politics at work in the state of Pennsylvania. Every body knows the old kind, the kind that has become a burden and a reproach to every community, the kind that plans to win by deception government and common welfare—that was the new kind of politics and politicians which I saw and heard.

Gifford Pinchot and William Draper Lewis are the politicians. They talked all day about making Pennsylvania a better place for all the men, women and children who live in it. I wish I could describe Pinchot and Lewis without appearing to flatter them. The standpatters are saying Pinchot isn't heavy enough for United States senator. Physically he isn't as heavy as the present senator. He doesn't size up to Boies Penrose in avoirdupois. Perhaps a change to lighter-weight senatorial stuff would be a good thing. I think I know the real light-weight when I see him—and the Lord knows I have seen a lot. This talk about Pinchot being under senatorial dimensions is one of those lies which are set afloat by the gang to defeat the men they fear. Roosevelt was a drunkard—and Pinchot isn't quite big enough for the senatorial job.

Well, what makes a man genuinely big? First of all, he must be an honest man. Then he must be sincere. Add a sane and cultured intelligence. Then add thorough and exact information. Finally, experience and achievement. Pinchot has more horse sense than any one of the fifty men I have heard repeat the insane statement that he isn't big enough for senator. He has courage of the fearless kind without vanity. He is one of the best informed men I know. He is honest and sincere as all clear, wholesome men and women are honest. He has accomplished more in a big public way than almost any other man in our public life. And Pinchot is able, a far stronger man in every way than Boies Penrose.

And what about William Draper Lewis? One of the intellectually great men of the country, for years the teacher of lawyers and one of the best equipped constitutional experts in the United States. The men who are belittling Pinchot and Lewis are men who put Tener and Penrose in office! I do not mean to be sarcastic nor am I casting any reflections on Governor Tener, but to be quite truthful it must be said that the belittlers of Pinchot and Lewis are self-indicted by the simple fact that they find no fault with our baseball Governor and our Standard Oil senator.

I saw something else new and strange yesterday. Pinchot stood in the middle of the road at Mayfield talking with two men just out of the mines. He was telling them that if they voted for him for United States senator they could trust him to stick to his principles. No man in Pennsylvania ever voted for a United States senator until this year. The rule of the people is already here. And so I saw a man aspiring to the highest office in the government, not down in Philadelphia hanging round the boss, not buzzing round the legislators to see how many votes he could control, but up in the street in Mayfield talking to his political masters, two miners. The people is now the Boss.

In Forest City Pinchot and Lewis stood in the street and talked to a little crowd on the sidewalk. It was early in the day. The usual varied village throng moved back and forth. These men, with a note of sincerity as unmistakable as it was novel in political speech making, told the little group they wanted to make Pennsylvania a better place for the people. They wanted a better child labor law. They wanted a workmen's compensation law. They wanted home rule for every community. They wanted to take the state out of the control of the corporations and give it back to the people. They were not agitators, not reckless overturners of society. Just patient pleaders for a square deal, for fair and honest treatment of the people.

And they put their new political gospel across. The people begin to see the truth. They listen earnestly, attentively. The rule of the people is here. Look out for Pinchot and Lewis, Mr. Standpatter. There is a new political Boss in Pennsylvania. The people are coming into their own.

For Forest-Fire Workers.

A special type of steel windmill tower has been adopted as the standard lookout tower for forest fire lookout purposes. The platform on top of the tower is inclosed to protect the lookout from sun and wind, and is large enough to provide room for his bed and working equipment.

Old Trees Raise Farm Values.

Well grown trees about the farm-house give it character as nothing else can do. Every older farm-house has them if the owner has not cut them down. If one wants to sell his farm, patriarchal trees work toward high prices. In the immediate vicinity of the house deciduous trees are preferable to evergreens, especially in winter.—Farm and Fireside.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning scalding sensation and is very pro-irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

Matter of Necessity.

Miserable Showing This Year of The Erstwhile Slugger

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

New York, July 22—Is Napoleon Lajoie, of the Naps, slipping? Has Father Time at last dimmed the batting eye of the man who ever will rank as one of the greatest sluggers in baseball history? Is the final curtain soon to be rung down on this star of 19 years?

These are the questions that agitate fandom more than any other just now, and there is none who doesn't hope that the batting slump of the veteran is but temporary and that instead of his star setting soon it will continue to blaze forth in the major league firmament for many years to come.

But the fact remains that Lajoie to date has made a more miserable showing at the bat than in any year since 1895 when he broke into the big league and set it on fire by his terrific batting.

Lajoie, according to the latest records, is about 50 points shy of the .300 mark, and he seems unable to "hit-em-where-they-ain't" as in other years. The ball no longer whistles from off his bat with bullet speed, as in the old days, and he no longer is ripping boards off fences with his terrific drives. Illness may have something to do with the slump, but many fear that Time has set its hand on the Cleveland wonder, and the days of his usefulness as a major leaguer are numbered.

Lajoie began the season with a grand batting average of .351 for 2112 games—the best record ever compiled by anyone over such a stretch of years. Wagner, of Pittsburgh, who had been in the majors 17 years up to the beginning of the season, had a grand average of .344 for 2282 games, while "Old Pop" Anson, during his 22 years as a big league star, compiled an average of .377 for 2250 games. If Lajoie fails to finish over the .300 mark this year it will reduce his grand average by several points, but it still will be remarkable enough to stand for many years to come. Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson have a chance to smash it—but will they be able to stand the big league pace for 18 years? And if they do, can they continue to hit at a clip that will give them an average of .351 for 18 years.

Insulting a butcher seems to be quite a crime in Detroit. Ty Cobb was a favorite back in the Michigan town until he rushed into a butcher shop and soaked a butcher upon the bean. Right away the whole darned town resented it. Ty lost his popularity instantly. The fans didn't care whether he jumped to the Reds, was traded to the Yankees or was shipwrecked on a cannibal island. Ty, by soaking a butcher, had in their minds, committed a heinous crime. Detroit must eat. And butchers supply meat. What if Ty had soaked the butcher so hard that the butcher would have been laid by for several months? Horrible thought. The Detroit neighborhood infested by that particular butcher would have had to go meatless. Shudders!

And so rather than submit that butcher and other meat dispensers to the danger of being soaked by the excitable Tyrus, the town has decided that it can get along without its baseball star. Detroit used to love Ty, but when the presence of Ty imperils the well-being of butchers—well, bye bye, Ty.

Hughey Jennings, who manages the team that owns the player that soaked the butcher, will be dreaming pennant dreams again if Smithson, a south-paw pitcher whom he recently secured, performs as well for the Tigers as he did in the minors.

Jennings got Smithson for $2750 from the Clinton, Illinois, team in the Central association. Smithson won 6 out of the ten games in which he participated, losing three of the four because of miserable support. He secured the title "Strike Out" King, because he struck out 98 batters in the 10 games—an average of nearly 10 men to a game.

Crews that lose boat races, fighters who fail to win in championship fights and golfers who fail to grab medals no longer need to worry about inventing alibis. The "experts" in those particular lines are doing all the ablying these days—and they leave nothing undone to excuse their erroneous predictions.

Reading the morning after the night before" story composed by an "expert" whose "sure winner" vanished among the also rans, is affording the general public almost as much pleasure these days as they got through the medium of a minstrel show in the old days.

A person addicted to the gambling habit slipped us the tip the other day that the surest way to make some easy money was to find out who the "expert" figures as a "sure winner" and then to bet the other way. But we aren't in accord with the tipster as to it being an absolutely sure way. Some of these days one of the "experts" may make a mistake and actually name the winner.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

A birthday party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Kantz, 515 Fourth street, East End, Tuesday evening in honor of Mrs. Kantz's 68th birthday. She is an invalid, but greatly enjoyed the occasion. At a late hour refreshments were served. Those present were: Mesdames A. I. Owdrick, McClelland, Lynch, Harvey, McFarland, Cox, Burns, Houser, Yeaggy, Means, Mr. and Mrs. Kantz, Misses Gene Harvey, Annabel Cow-drick, Gertrude McFarland, EllenHau-ser, and C. I. McFarland.

PLEASANT OUTING

Woodland Ladies Have a Delightful Time at Home of Freeman Shope.

On Thursday last a jolly party of Woodland ladies drove over to the Knobs, a distance of 14 miles, and spent the day with Mrs. Freeman Shope. All enjoyed the outing im-mensely, especially the delicious din-ner and supper prepared by that most hospitable lady. Those present were: Mrs. Ashley Stewart and baby, Mrs. John Gingery, Mrs. Ralph Redifer and Teddy, Mrs. Owen Duffy, Mrs. Ash-ley Soult, Mrs. Charles Stevens, Mrs. John Falkner, Mrs. George Snyder, Mrs. Alex Dugan, Mrs. James Palm-er and Mrs. Ulyssius Walker.

IMPROVED SCREENS

Pictures at New Opera House to be Shown More Clearly.

The manager of the New opera house has secured for use in showing pictures the Mirroroid screens, which are a great improvement over the screens, which are a great improve-ment over the screens formerly used. By the use of these screens the pic-tures are made clearer and brighter, the projection of the pictures being wonderfully improved.

With these screens all of the minute details of the picture which are lost to the observer when the ordinary curtain is used are shown. This new screen is sure to please patrons of the movies at the New opera house.

Editor in Name Only.

Fictitious "editors" are regular mem-bers of the staff of many Russian newspapers. Some time ago the so called "responsible editor" of a labor journal was charged under a statute relating to the incitement of class en-mity. He pleaded not guilty, and it turned out that he could not even read and could only write his own name with much difficulty. He had been promised $15 monthly for giving his name as responsible editor of the pa-per. Although the journal was issued in St. Petersburg, the "editor" worked in Riga as a factory hand and was actually serving a sentence for robbery when the charge was brought against him.

Close Call.

"Hold on!" cried the proud young father as the minister was about to proceed. "Before the baby is christened I want to change his name." "What is the trouble?" the good man asked. "Ebenezer is a good name." "No matter. We'll call him Harold. I've just heard that Uncle Ebenezer, the old fool! has married a woman who is young enough to be his daugh-ter."—Judge.

Poor Adam.

"If Adam had lived till now," says Mr. Snowden, "and had worked hard at honest labor the whole time, and had been a thrifty man withal, he would not have had an income like some of those enjoyed today." Mr. Snowden is apparently presuming that Adam's wife would have lived as long as her husband.—Punch.

Distribution.

The longer I live the more I am persuaded that the gifts of Providence are more equally distributed than we are apt to think. Among the poor so little is enjoyed so much, and among the rich so much is enjoyed so little.—Margaret Bottoms.

What Noah Overlooked.

If Noah had swatted those two flies as they started up the ark's gangplank he would have saved a heap of trou-ble.

STRIKING USE OF FLOUNCING.

Machine embroidery flouncing in col-ors on a cotton crape is beautifully de-veloped in this afternoon frock for a fashionable summer toilet. The vogue for ribbon is indicated in the skirt and the sash, which is draped generously down the back.

BEAUTIFUL AFTERNOON FROCK

This charming gown was built of sheer handkerchief linen elaborately embroidered by hand. The sash of em-broidered linen is the salient feature of this up to the minute frock.

CAMISOLES AND CHEMI-VESTS

Camisoles, which are brassieres made with the little shoulder caps, encircle the body with a tiny frill of net above, not reaching above the arms, with rib-bons over the shoulders. This lace is fastened to a narrow piece of doubled net, with beading through which rib-bon is run. Very thin lengthwise strips of embroidery may form a camisole, with lace three inches wide across the top. They fasten on the left side. Lit-tle chemi-vests to be worn next to the flesh are made of nainsook, crape, china silk, lawn, etc., and are twenty-four to twenty-nine inches long and without an inch of extra material.

Y. M. C. A. FOR OSCEOLA

Option of Fine Site for Building Has Been Secured.

At the close of the Johnson evange-listic meetings at Osceola it was suggested that citizens organize a Young Men's Christian association in the town. The idea was received with enthusiasm among those who know the great good such association does in a community.

Committees were appointed and pro-bable sites were discussed. An option on the handsome residence of the late George M. Brisbin was secured and a fund of several thousand dollars subscribed toward the carrying out of the project.

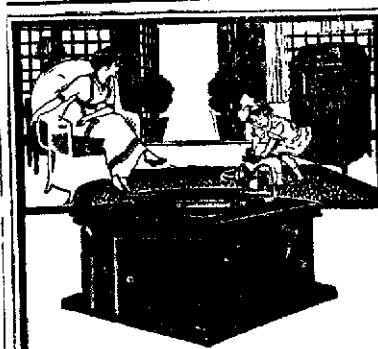

The people who attended the evan-gelistic meetings are enthusiastic over the proposition, and there is little doubt that the enterprise will be con-summated. It will require about $8000 to finance the project.

No Street Cars Here.

A lady with some style about her detained from the Tyrone & Clear-field train the other day at Market street and asked to be directed to the street cars, as she wished to go the Dimeling. She was very much sur-prised to learn that such an up-to-date town as Clearfield has no street cars and that she would have to walk to the Dimeling, one square distant.

They Return Thanks.

Alexander Dugan and James Palm-er, two of the heaviest losers in the Woodland fire, on Saturday night, wish to return their thanks to their neigh-bors who aided the men removing part of their personal property from the burning buildings.

respect the sentiment and devotion which prompts it, but insist that you substantiate the charges. I defy you to produce authentic documents which show me to have been wanting in pa-triotism and in patriotic foresight at that time."

Hoots and Cheers.

When court adjourned the lawyers and others rushed inside the bar, giv-ing rousing cheers for Labori and shaking his hand.

As M. Caillaux left the palace of justice the crowd hooted or cheered, according to their political opinions. The ex-premier hastily entered a taxi-cab and drove off.

An interesting bit of testimony produced yesterday was that of Pres-ident Poincare, whose deposition was taken by Judge Emile Forichon, the first president of the court of ap-peals.

This narrated how Caillaux, then minister of finance, called upon Pres-ident Poincare on the day Calmette was killed and spoke about the prob-able publication in the Gigoar of let-ters between himself and Mme. Caillaux.

In the course of an excited talk, M. Caillaux exclaimed, according to the de-position: "If Calmette publishes the letters I will kill him."

the operators have lost through the numerous strikes, but it is not ex-pected that anything like this sum will be demanded by the operators.

Other business of a private charac-ter was transacted and the committee adjourned. The next meeting will be held at Clearfield.

There was no joint meeting of mem-bers of the United Mine Workers and the executive committee of the as-sociation, as the Progress was errone-ously informed yesterday.

OPENS UP NOSTRILS, CLEARS HEAD, ENDS COLDS OR CATARRH AT ONCE

Instantly Relieves Swollen, Inflamed Nose, Head, Throat—You Breathe Freely—Dull Headache Goes—Nast Discharge Stops.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dull-ness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now. Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heats the inflamed, swollen membrane, which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes im-mediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.
